Problem Solving (A3) Report

1. Identify a Problem	PLAN

- When someone is looking for coaching, they can find a lot of problems when it comes to finding an instructor. Sometimes people want a coach with a specific level, or who has skills training a certain type of mechanical skills and it becomes a complex path.
- There are many different types of coaching, as well as a wide variety of topics on which to be coached. Whether it's sports, or esports, there is no place where coaches in general can publish their classes and the results of their students, and that helps you advertise to acquire new students.

2. Set the Target	PLAN

- There are two important objectives regarding this problem: the first is students seeking coaching to improve their mechanical or technical skills. The second target is coaches looking to expand their students and show the world the impact of their training.

3. Analyze the Causes	PLAN

- There are tons of places where you can advertise, but none of them are specific to coaching.

- In order to find a coach that meets your needs, you must either know him, or know someone who knows him. The chances of being satisfied with your workouts increases if you have a place that compiles the trainers so that you can compare them better.

4. Propose & Implement Countermeasures	PLAN/DO

- Make an application based on forums that allows coaches and students to interact in a better way.

- Create a profile system for coaches that gathers the number of satisfied students, a 5-star rating and a place where they can post photos or videos about their strategies. In addition to a place where you can describe the strategies you use and what you can learn from the classes.
